The Daily Commercial

SATURDAY, MAY 16, 1868.

THE COMMERCIAL is the largest daily paper in the State, and gives daily one-fourth more reading than any other paper in Pittsburgh. It is the only Pittsburgh paper that uses the telegraph liberally, gives full market reports, and all features of the day.

As proof of the extensive circulation of the various reports of the COMMERCIAL, we will state that they are regularly copied in the New York Evening Express, Daily Mail, Sun, Age, and other papers of the character in that and other cities, and that leading English commercial papers and circulars regularly reprint them each week. There is scarcely a hamlet in the land, having an Iron Factory, Oil Refinery, or leading manufactory of any kind that is not a subscriber to the COMMERCIAL, principally, because its reports are always full and reliable given of the Pittsburgh market.

WEEKLY COMMERCIAL.

Presidential Year—20 Copies for $15.

In clubs of twenty the WEEKLY COMMERCIAL will be sent for $7 25 a copy—but in no case will an order for less than twenty be received. This reduction has been made to meet the wishes of many friends who stand ready to get up the COMMERCIAL an extensive circulation.

At this rate it is the cheapest—as it is one of the largest and best—papers in the country. Besides political reading, each number will contain all the news, a large variety of Literary, Agricultural and Home Reading, and the fullest Reports of all the leading markets of the country. The market reports alone are worth ten times a year's subscription.

Our friends everywhere are requested to act as agents. Address,

COMMERCIAL, PITTSBURGH.

In reply to an inquiry of a correspondent we have to say, that if two-thirds of the Senators present sustain any one article, the expulsion of the President will necessarily follow. The prospect is that at least two articles will be sustained.

Mr. FESSENDEN in his recess for acquittal is reported to have said that the offenses of the President should be of such a character as to cause his removal to be demanded by the people. If the Senator from Maine is not utterly devoid of his senses he must by this time be convinced that the people demand the removal of the President, and also, now that he has shown his hand, of the Senator himself.

According to the adjournment, the Court of Impeachment will assemble again to-day. As we stated yesterday, another adjournment for several days is not an improbable event, two or three Senators being ill. The President and his friends still profess considerable confidence; and Mr. SEWARD is understood to say that whether he is convicted or acquitted, will depend on a single vote. After the developments in regard to Mr. CHASE, it would be strange if Senators should vote for conviction. There were rumors yesterday that both the West Virginia Senators were for acquittal.

BIRCH PENDLETON, asserting his leadership in the Democratic ranks, declares that Mr. BELMONT and his friends with all their "gold and wine," cannot furnish the party with a Presidential candidate. He claims that, with a candidate holding Mr. PENDLETON's views, or even more advanced and declined than he, on the sole of "plough-holders against the bondholders," the Democracy can carry every State in the Northwest. PENDLETON feels and talks as though he held the destiny of the party in his hands; and well he may, since his paper has become the organ of Democracy.

The sale of operations on the Union Pacific Railroad are now on a scale of such magnitude as to defy Indian forays. An army of workmen will prove an army for protection, at all times to "lay down the shovel and the hoe" and take up the musket. The present force is about two thousand men, and three thousand are soon to be put at work beyond Salt Lake City. As the great Manufacturing Center, Pittsburgh has a deep interest in the progress of this great work. So vast a region that will be opened by this Road, must have a marked influence on our trade. It is distilled 500 miles west of Omaha, and going westward at the rate of three miles a day.

The new trail through which the Union men of the land are passing—like the trail which on repeated occasions during the war of the rebellion they were compelled to undergo—is proving how groundless was the prediction of their opponents. The Republican party cannot be killed off by ANDREW JOHNSON, and whether through the faithlessness even of some of its most honored members, he remains in the White House, or through the assertion of justice he is banished to private life and the lightning he so richly merits, the Republican party will complete the work committed to it. Trials now, as many times before, will renew its spirit and cause every member to be all the more resolved.

The party that put the Rebellion down cannot itself be overthrown, even though all the TRUMBULLS, the FESSENDENS and the CHASES in the land combine against it. We know that the faithless are not many, and that the organization is as perfect as ever. We have failed to perceive, as yet, the slightest disposition on the part of Republicans to despond; on the contrary, the attempted betrayal of the party has everywhere brought Republicans to their feet, all the more determined to fight the battle with ANDREW JOHNSON and his allies, as they fought the war of the rebellion, through to the end.

WHO ARE FOR ACQUITTAL?

It is one of the peculiar features of the impeachment trial, that the man who, from his entrance into public life, has been a distinguished consistent and trusted Radical, should be foremost in opposition to the conviction of ANDREW JOHNSON. We mean Chief Justice CHASE. As an anti-slavery man, when to be one cost something, and as an emancipationist, when it was a startling proposition, he has had a distinct and elevated position before the country. His Radicalism was of early growth and has been long maintained. As a Radical Statesman he has had the choicest honors conferred on him. Conservatism is a word unknown in his vocabulary, save to despise; and till very recently, if he is not still, was he the favorite for the Presidency of the New York Tribune, the great Radical organ of the country. Nevertheless, he has felt a deep anxiety for the acquittal of the President, and done more to insure such a result than was proper for him to do, occupying the position he does. In this particular he has laid himself open to severe criticism, which he cannot hope to escape. Before the trial commenced there were rumors that Mr. CHASE would side with the President's friends, and that whatever influence he could exert would be for acquittal. On the threshold of the trial the Chief Justice and leading Republican Senators came in collision. Soon, and it required a direct vote to remind him. At different stages he has manifested as much feeling and done things so transcending what was expected of him, that he has been openly denounced by Republicans and Republican journals, for playing a part which in their estimation was of more service to the President than the efforts of his retained counsel. This is not the least remarkable development of the trial. If Senators TRUMBULL and FESSENDEN are "Conservatives," certainly Mr. CHASE is not and never has been; and as a Radical of the old school he has done more for the acquittal of the President than they with their two votes have been able to do. And here we introduce what Col. FORNEY, who enjoys the best opportunities for knowing whereof he speaks, says of the part Mr. CHASE has played:

"The sole defection which has occurred in the ranks of Republicans and Union men in the Senate, on the question of jurisdiction, was that of Chief Justice CHASE. He has been a party to every step in the proceedings, and has given his official sanction to every ruling of the Court. He has done more than any other man to create the impression that the President could not be convicted, and to encourage his friends to hope for his acquittal

Mr. Bingham's Eloquence.

One of the most effective passages in Mr. Bingham's argument of Monday was contained in these words:

The gentleman from New York (Mr. Evarts) took occasion to refer to the fugitive slave bill of 1850, a bill that was disgraceful in the Congress which enacted it, a bill that was in direct violation of the letter and spirit of the constitution—a bill of which I can say at least, although I doubt much whether the gentleman from New York can, that it never found an advocate in me; a bill of which Mr. Webster said that in his judgment it was unwarranted by the Constitution, a bill which offered a bribe out of the common treasury of the nation to every magistrate who sat in judgment on the right of a fleeing bondman to that liberty which belonged to him; when God "breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and he became a living soul;" a bill which offered a reward to the ministers of justice to hasten the flight of the poor, a bill which, shutting the consciences of the American people and the consciences of the civilized world, made it a crime for any one under the banner or in any of the waters of the United States to help a fellow-man to that liberty which God has offered to all; enacted for the purpose of sustaining that crime of crimes, that sum of all villainies, which made merchandise of immortality, which transformed a man into a thing, a being of reason into what, for want of a better name, we call a slave, with no acknowledged right in the present, with no hope of inheritance in the great hereafter, and to whose half-darkened soul the sun seems was voiceless and God himself seemed silent, a bill under the direct violation of which that horrible tragedy was enacted within our own city, Cincinnati, within the sight of Bunker Hill, of your own beautiful city, when Margaret Gardner, with her babe locked upon her breast, pursued by the officers of the law, in her wild frenzy fought her mother's affection in the joy she felt at sending before the appointed time by her own hand the spotless soul of her child back to her God who gave it, rather than allow it to be lured back into the hell of human bondage under American law; a bill, nevertheless, by the American people even on that day when Anthony Burns walked in chains under the shadow of Bunker Hill, where "every turf beneath your feet is a soldier's sepulchre," and where sleep the first just martyrs in the cause of American independence, to be tried before a magistrate in a corpse surrounded itself with chains and guarded with bayonets, and yet the people stood by and said: Let the law be executed until it be repealed. Let the law be executed that the American people recognizing the right of any President to set aside the law. Who does not know that two years after the enactment of the fugitive slave law every one was silenced in the platform of the party whose representatives to-day insist on the executive prerogative to set aside your laws, and scoff into your government the foul element in Congress and out of Congress, insulting the very fugitive slave bill, should it be suppressed. The body that adopted that resolution of 1856 must remember that there is something stronger after all than the resolution by mere partisans in convention assembled. They ought to have noticed that God is not in the earthquake or in the fire, but in the still, small voice, speaking to the enlightened conscience of men, and that voice is omnipotent. God knows that for the honor of our common country I would take the long backward look, and come the unbroken and the shame of the American people from the day of American disgrace. They nominated their candidate for President, and he accepted their terms, and was carried into the Presidential chair by the votes of all the States of the Union. With such a record as that, with such a law, offensive to the judgment and conscience of the people of the United States, and of the civilized world, enacted by the men who have since come before the American Senate and tell us that it is the traditional policy of the American people to allow their laws to be defied by any Executive! I deny it. There is not a line in our history that does not give the denial to the assumption. It has never been done, never.

How an Eruption of Vesuvius Looks.

A correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette, writing from Mount Vesuvius, April 4, gives the following unusually clear and interesting account of one of the explosive exhibitions of that famous mountain: We had heard several explosions as we came up the mountain, and had seen an occasional shower of sparks thrown up above the little crater; and these gradually increased until we had taken our stand as described. Then for more than two hours the hill above us continued to shoot forth an almost constant succession of explosions of brilliant burning stones. I forget who it was (on the comparison, but I don't think I can give a better idea of it than by saying that each explosion was like a vast grandsire of rockets, only that there was more speed about it, and leaves sparkled owing to the different sizes of the stones shot out, and that there was more intense light at the first outburst than in the case of rockets. Flame there certainly was none—this we observed carefully, though the trails of the shooting stones, and the illuminated vapor, might almost excuse the word. The noise of the discharges was not a bang. It was a perfect roar, almost exactly resembling the waves on a beach and wind blowing through sheets. It varied in intensity, but was nearly continuous, and of the character mentioned. The mountain trembled perceptibly enough during the whole of our stay.

It is impossible for me to calculate exactly, but I judged that there were from 1,000 to 1,500 stones in each great discharge, and there were often as many as eight or ten discharges in a minute. The majority of the stones were small—the largest say as large as two bricks end to end. The large ones mostly fell back into the crater, but the small ones being thrown higher and more acted on by the wind, fell in immense numbers on the leeward slope of the small crater and on the same side of the great cone beyond. To my mind this was a spectacle in its totality, far more than the discharges themselves, at any rate, it was quite new to me. I have heard it said that the cone becomes "red hot" under such discharges. This is not an accurate description of what I saw. "Red" is not the word, but "golden," and the cone was not covered even by these copious showers. The night was far more beautiful than if it had been on fire. The cone, instead of golden sparks on the dead black surface—the small ones generally resting where they fell, while the large ones rolled through them down the slope, and the constant change as the shower after shower descended, made a variegated and beautiful spectacle such as was of itself alone worth the ascent. It formed a wonderful pedestal to the luminous which surrounded it, and which were naturally the great attraction. I could not calculate the height to which some of the small stones were thrown, but it was very great. There was generally one which went far higher than all the rest, and pierced upward toward the moon, who looked calmly down mocking such vain attempts to reach her. The larger pieces were, with rare exceptions, not thrown so high; indeed many of them only just appeared over the rim of the cone, above which they came floating leisurely up to show their brilliant forms and then, while in full flight for a second, and then subside again into the abyss.

Scarlet Fever.

It is not very safe to rely much upon newspaper opinions on medical or legal subjects. But here are some remarks on scarlet fever, which we find in a recent number of the London Times, communicated by "A Fellow of the College of Physicians," which seem to be sensible and timely:

It is a notorious fact that scarlet fever prevails extensively throughout the country. We hear of it and we meet with it everywhere,—in public schools and in private houses, in the cottage of the poor, in the parsonage and in the palace. The wide prevalence of this fearful malady is due to a variety of causes, but there are some to which I desire to direct particular attention. In the first place it frequently happens that persons who are recovering from the disease travel in public conveyances while they are desquamating, or throwing off the cuticle. From their bodies, and, therefore, while they are still a source of danger to all who come near them, or who follow them as travellers in the same vehicles. In this way it constantly happens that railway carriages, omnibuses, cabs, and other public conveyances become infected by the subtle poison, which may be a source of danger and of death for an indefinite period.

Shortly after the reassembling of a great school it frequently happens that scarlet fever makes its appearance. Why is this? Perhaps the boys come together from various and distant parts of the country. In the course of their journey there is a high degree of probability that some of them will travel in an infected carriage and that one or more of them will contract the fever which may then spread more or less through the school. Thus the railways continually scatter scarlet fever over the country, as they recently conveyed the cattle plague.

Another of danger is this—A convalescent from scarlet fever is thought to require change of air, and while life and limb are still peeling and thus throwing off the fever poison, he travels by rail, infecting the carriages and his fellow-passengers on the way, and goes into a lodging by the sea-side, and there infects the inhabitants, or from a warm notion the subject of scarlet fever is never mentioned. The unsuspecting landlady lodges her dangerous guest, the befalling and the families become infected, and the next occupant of the lodgings, coming to them probably for health, takes the fever.

The germs of the disease will remain active in the furniture, carpets and curtains for many months. In last week's Lancet a correspondent relates a case in which some new blankets, having been infected by scarlet fever, were put away unopened in a wardrobe. Fourteen months afterwards the mistress of the house had those blankets taken out and put upon her own bed, in a few days she took the fever and died.

If care were taken to cleanse thoroughly and disinfect all articles of clothing, bedding and furniture, and if all persons, acting upon the golden rule of loving their neighbors as themselves, would abstain from travelling by public conveyances, or entering hotels and lodging houses while there is reason to believe that the germs of the disease are still clinging to them, we should hear much less than we now do of the sorrow and suffering occasioned by this formidable scourge.

The Passenger Pneumatic to Go West.—An apparently well authenticated report has reached the office of the Nashville Banner from East Tennessee, that the President's old homestead in Greenville is being refitted preparatory to its occupation by its old inmates. Those repairs were ordered by the President, it is said, and that they have been hurried of late in case the house might be ordered as a place of rest. Mr. Johnson's household, which has been scattered and refined, Home too, the workmen, the refitted, Home too, the work, for what purpose has not been definitely ascertained.—Louisville Democrat, May 9.

Classical Training.

It is wonderful how close a parallel to classical training could be made out of that paleontology to which I refer. In the first place I could get up an ontological primer myself, as pedantic in its terminology, as altogether distasteful to the youthful mind, as to beat the record famous production of the head masters out of the field in all these conditions. Next, I could carry one my hops upon easy limits, and their ingenuity in the application of my outer grammatical rules to the interpretation, or construing, of those fragments. To those who had reached the higher classes I might give still terms to be built up into animals, giving great honor and reward to him who succeeded in fabricating monsters most entirely in accordance with the rules. That would answer to verse making and easy writing in the dead languages. To be sure, if a great comparative anatomist were to look at these fabrications, he might smile, or shake his head, or laugh. But what then? Would such a catastrophe destroy the parallel? What think you would Cicero, or Horace, say to the production of the best sixth form going? And would not Terence step his own and our half, if he could be present at an English performance of his own piece? Would Hamlet, in the mouths of a set of French actors, with stencil most in pronouncing English after the fashion of their own tongue, be more hideously offensive?

But it will be said that I am forgetting the reserve, the human interest which appertains to medical studies. To this I reply that it is only a very strong man who can appreciate the charms of a landscape as he is hailing up a mountain side, along a bad road. What with discomforts, stones, ruts, and a prevailing sense of the wisdom of rest and he thankful, most of us have little enough sense of the beautiful under those circumstances. The ordinary school boy is positively in this case. He finds Parnassus uncommonly steep, and there is no chance of his having much time or inclination to look about him until he gets to the top. And even those out of him he does not get to the top.—Huxley.

Formation of the Bed of the British Seas.

M. Delesse, last week, laid before the French Academy of Sciences a large map of the various beds and rocks constituting the bottom of the British seas. This bottom chiefly consists of sand, slime, more or less mixed with the latter, and different stones. The latter, already consolidated, are anterior to the present periods and do not belong deposits. They stretch far into the sea from the northwest coasts of Scotland, the Orkneys, and the Hebrides; they also exist at the mouth of the Channel and the northern coast of Ireland. In the British channel they mark the junction of Cornwall with Brittany; they appear in front of the Isle of Wight and Portland with the continents. To the east of England these stony formations are hardly to be met with elsewhere than at the mouth of the Tees and in the direction of Cape Flamborough. They generally form the bottom of the straits and flinks that are washed by rapid currents. Shifting deposits are larger in proportion to the rapidity of the waters that have borne them. The most important consist of sand, which occupies immense space on the Atlantic coast, the British channel, and the German sea. Gravel deposits, which are not extensive, are to be found on the western coasts, in the British channel, in the Solent, Land's End and the Scilly Islands, and south of Cork. Flint shingle borders the white cliffs of England, but is also met with in the German ocean, in the Solent, in the Orkneys. Shingy deposits are peculiar to the mouth of the Southampton Water, Torbay, and the Irish coast of St. George's channel. In various localities of the coasts there are marine deposits of mollusks and shells. They are also met with rare on the eastern coast of England and the southern one of Ireland, but very frequent in the Hebrides, and also around Scotland, especially in the Minch, and between the Orkneys and Moray Frith.—Galignani.

Remarkable Incident.

When the steamer Stonewall, on her way to be delivered to the Japanese, anchored in Passenger Bay, in the Straits of Magellan, on the 11th of December last, two horsemen came down to the beach and raised a flag. An armed boat was sent to them which brought them aboard. One of them proved to be Col. McDougal, formerly of Indianapolis, Indiana, who is now living with the Patagonian Indians, and has been for a long time. The other was the Chief Cashmere, a gigantic fellow, six feet six, though he is smaller than the average of the tribe. Both of them were in rags, but Col. McDougal said he was well satisfied. He has three wife men with him, one of whom was his wife, and he procures medicines that they came aboard. He was surprised on coming aboard to find the vessel was commanded by his old friend Capt. Brown, who immediately recognized him. In return for medicines, clothing, provisions, etc., the tribe presented the ship's officers with a young lion, several ostriches' eggs, and a couple of guanacos. The latter are a species between the camel and deer. They are from six to eight feet in height, and wear nothing but the skin of a guanaco.

CITY OF PITTSBURGH WATER LOAN.

Proposals for $250,000 00 of the Bonds of the

"Water Extension Loan,"

Will be received at the OFFICE OF THE CITY CONTROLLER, A. M. of this date.

They are Coupon Bonds bearing interest at the rate of Seven Per Cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, at the office of the City Treasurer, and the Principal will be paid off in Twenty-five years from April 1st, 1868.

By Act of Assembly the revenue of the Water Works is pledged for the payment of the Bonds and Coupons, and the latter are by law made receivable for Water Rents, and are not authorizing the loan provides a SINKING FUND of not less than one per cent. of all Bonds which may have been issued in permanent improvements, which will be sufficient, with accruing interest, to redeem all Bonds within the time limited, to-wit: the Principal Thereof.

The proceeds of these Bonds can only be used for the extension and improvement of the Water Works, which will increase the revenue, while at the present it is far more than sufficient to secure the payment of the interest and retirement of the Bonds.

These Bonds are EXEMPT from STATE, COUNTY and CITY TAX, and, together with all the laws governing advertising, make the Bonds the most desirable security offered to the public.

Further information can be obtained.

By order of Finance Committee.

THOMAS STEEL, Controller.

BEWARE OF THAT REMORSE-LESS and insidious destroyer of the human race,

CONSUMPTION.

Check and conquer its advances, lest you fall its victims. When attacked with any of its preliminary symptoms, no matter how slight, be on your guard, and promptly use the remedy ere too late.

DR. SARGENT'S COUGH SYRUP

Is an old, well tried, certain and standard remedy for Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Difficulty of Breathing, Pain, or Oppression in the Chest or Lungs, and all diseases of the Pulmonary Organs. Having been before the public for years fully tested and indorsed for many years by members of well known families, it needs no certificates of its merits on record. Have you a cough which has gradually increased from a slight one to one of permanent standing? Lose no time but procure a bottle of Dr. SARGENT'S Cough Syrup, which will surely relieve you of the dangerous pulmonary symptoms and check a permanent cure. Do not spend money on advance and long sleepless nights of torture and pain from Asthma or Difficulty of Breathing, for Dr. SARGENT'S Cough Syrup will act promptly, relieve you, and gradually restore you to your freedom from pain and pleasant sleep. Are your lungs sore and irritated, indicating inflammation? This is one of the most dangerous symptoms, and should be promptly removed.

DR. SARGENT'S COUGH SYRUP

Will heal the soreness, allay the inflammation and restore the lungs to their pristine health and vigor. It is pleasant to the taste, prompt and agreeable in its take, while powerful and sure in its action. For sale by all druggists in the country.
